Serving Those Who Serve

The United Service Organizations Inc. has a long legacy of providing comfort and support to American troops stationed all over the world, offering a "home away from home."

In February 1941, several service organizations came together to form the USO. Their mission: boost the morale of America's armed forces, both at home and abroad. USO clubs, lounges and recreational centers were established in places like storefronts, museums, train depots and even barns! Military and support personnel could come to these sites to socialize, watch movies or stage shows, play sports and attend dances.

The clubs also provided a quiet spot to write letters, receive travel assistance or simply rest and recharge. From the first year of service, Camp Shows, traveling shows featuring famous entertainers of the day, were a hallmark of the USO. As one of the USO's biggest supporters, actor Bob Hope became known as the "one-man morale machine" for his devotion to America's service members. Combining song, dance and comedy, nobody lifted soldiers' spirits more than Hope. For 50 years, he traveled to the front lines and spent nearly every holiday season entertaining the troops.

After a brief disbandment following World War II, the USO reunited during the Korean War and has offered military support ever since, in times of both peace and conflict. To this day, the USO is the nation's leading service organization for military members and their families.
